ASHVILLE MAN HELD ON BLACK MARKET CHARGE

Walter Cummins Accused Of Selling Tire To OPA Man Without Certificate

TWO OTHER CHARGES

Illegal Transfer Of Tires And Illegal Possession Claimed By OPA

Black market sales of automobile tires were revealed Friday when investigators from the OPA in Columbus announced the arrest of an Ashville tire dealer on three charges in the illegal handling of automobile tires.

Acting on a tip-off from the Pickaway county sheriff's department Thursday OPA men purchased a tire from Walter R. Cummins, 47, 43 Crumley street, without any tire rationing certificate.

F. Dale Gottheld and Joseph D. Cleary, OPA investigators, called on the case by the Pickaway county sheriff's department, secured affidavits from two Circleville residents stating that they had purchased tires from Cummins without a rationing certificate.

Gottheld, according to the report, purchased a tire from Cummins for $35 without a tire rationing certificate. The report also stated that the OPA investigator wrote a check for the amount of the purchase, which Cummins accepted as payment for the illegally sold tire.

The tire which Gottheld purchased was listed at a ceiling price of $15.20 plus taxes and was sold for almost $20 more than the ceiling price, OPA stated.

Cummins Friday was to be taken from the Pickaway county jail to be arraigned in Federal court, Columbus, on charges of illegal possession of tires, illegal transfer of tires and selling tires above the ceiling price. Hearing and arraignment will be before U. S. Commissioner Robert Newton.

When questioned by the sheriff and the OPA investigators Cummins maintained that he was being "framed" and would not tell where he was getting the black-market tires nor would he reveal how many he has sold.

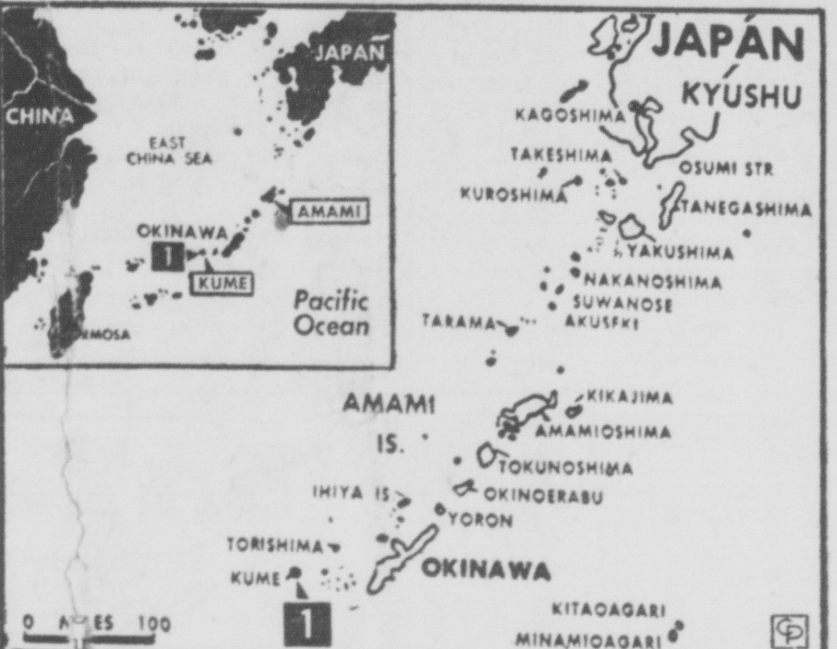

In 1942 Cummins was committed to the Pickaway county jail for 15 days following his conviction by a jury on charges of assault and battery of Cecil Scott, Ashville deputy marshal and water plant superintendent. He paid a fine of $50 and costs of $116.37 and committed to the county jail February 4, 1942. He was released February 18.

New Story Of Heroism Is Revealed

PORTLAND, Ore., June 29—Amazing daring, skill and "plain old fashioned American ingenuity" brought the U. S. S. Bright home after three minutes of hell off Okinawa, her skipper said today.

The spunky little destroyer escort limped into port Wednesday for repairs after a brief but hectic battle last May 13 with a Japanese "kamikaze" suicide plane.

Lt. Cmdr. William A. McMahan, Chicago, who guided the ship across the Pacific under its own power and without a rudder, called the Bright's survival a bit of "fantastic luck."

All personnel in the ship's steering room were wounded but, miraculously, none fatally.

McMahan recalled for reporters the moment of "frightening hell" when he saw the Japanese suicide pilot's plane crash astern the Bright.

The vessel suffered a "veering" hit on the stern which blew it below the water line up to the main deck, he said. A 500-pound bomb attached to the plane exploded after the crash, pushing the steering engine against a watertight bulkhead and blowing large holes in the main deck and in the 40 millimeter gun magazine.

Numerous fires in the ship's electrical equipment immediately spouted below decks.

Twenty-one crew members have been recommended for awards for their heroism during the attack, but McMahan credited Robert F. (Continued on Page Two)

Margesson to head campaign for Churchill

LONDON, June 29—Prime Minister Churchill's conservative party in a surprise move today turned over full direction of its campaign to Lord Margesson, who once reportedly said he would not grieve to see the Germans and Russians exterminate each other.

The move came as Churchill returned to London aboard a special train after a four-day, 1,500-mile campaign tour of England and Scotland.

Margesson, chief party whip in commons in the Baldwin and Chamberlain administrations, has a reputation of ruthlessness in party affairs.

He replaced Ralph Asheton, nominally chairman of the party, as campaign director. Asheton said he wished to spend the last few days before the election July 5 in his own constituency of Rushcliffe.

Political observers speculated whether the change indicated 11th hour panic in conservative circles.

Margesson formerly served in the Churchill cabinet, but bowed out in the uproar that followed his purported remark during a speech at Manchester. It came in the midst of Soviet demands for a second front.

Churchill was tired but enthusiastic as he returned to London, afternoon.

SOLONS WORK PAST DEADLINE

Clocks Masked As Assembly Tries To End Session; Fund Bill Approved

COLUMBUS, June 29—Ohio's 96th general assembly worked beneath masked clocks today in an effort to end its working sessions after a conference committee agreed on a record-breaking $402,789,338 appropriation bill.

Workmen placed cloths over the faces of the house and senate clocks this morning after the legislature failed to meet its Thursday midnight deadline. All business completed today will be presumed to have been done Thursday.

The conference committee report represented a major victory for the senate since it sliced only $2,727,127 from the more than $13,000,000 which was added by the upper house to the original house figure of $391,499,969.

Both houses still must approve the conference committee's report, however, before the assembly can go home. The senate also still must act on the $74,929,000 capital improvements bill for post-war additions and betterments.

The senate yesterday delayed a vote on the measure, presumably in an effort to force the house conferees to accept the higher senate version of the appropriations bill.

Major reductions in the appropriations bill included $1,735,000 of $2,500,000 in additional monies for universities, $500,000 of a $1,500,000 senate increase for old age pensions, and $250,000 of a $500,000 increase for poor relief.

The house yesterday wrote fire to the local government fund battle when it voted 111-11 to accept a conference committee report allocating $16,000,000 a year in state funds to the political subdivisions in 1945-46.

Since the senate approved the committee's action Wednesday, only the signature of Gov. Frank (Continued on Page Two)

WATER TRIAL MAY GO TO JURY FRIDAY NIGHT

Defense and prosecution counsel Friday were making their arguments in the closing session of the appropriation suit of the City of Circleville against the Ohio Water Service Company. The trial is expected to go to the Pickaway county common pleas court jury late Friday or early Saturday morning.

All evidence and witnesses for both the prosecution and the defense had been heard at the time of the Thursday evening adjournment.

Defense counsel had presented their opening arguments and the prosecution had presented part of their closing arguments before the jury was dismissed for lunch Friday at noon. Defense closing arguments will be presented Friday afternoon.

CHAOS WOULD RESULT WITHOUT SECURITY PLAN

One-Time Isolationist To Work For Quick Approval Of Security League

ANTICIPATES CRITICISM

Senator States Nations Can Cooperate In Peace Work As During War

WASHINGTON, June 29—Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg, R., Mich., told the senate today that world chaos is the alternative to the United Nations security league.

Vandenberg, chairman of Senate Republicans and a delegate to the San Francisco conference which drafted the security charter, made his formal report to the senate in a stirring speech for early ratification.

"This can be a new emancipation proclamation for the world," he declared.

He pleaded with charter critics to be realistic in their appraisal of the document in the light of world facts and to give it at least a chance to see whether collective security can prevent another world war.

The onetime isolationist told the senate he would support the treaty with all the resources at his command.

"I shall do this in the deep conviction that the alternative is physical and moral chaos in many weary places of the earth," he said.

"I shall do it because there must be no default in our oft-pledged purpose to outlaw aggression so far as lies within our human power. I shall do it because this plan, regardless of infirmities, holds great promise that the United Nations may collaborate for peace as effectively as they had made common cause for war. I shall do it because peace must not be cheated of its only collective chance."

Vandenberg addressed most of his 5,000-word speech to answering possible criticisms of the charter.

He recognized, first, that it may not be perfect. But, he insisted, it is a start which can be corrected in the future.

"But there will be no future for it unless we make this start," he persisted. "I doubt if there could (Continued on Page Two)

MERCURY CLIMBS TO 92, HIGHEST MARK OF YEAR

Pickaway countians were still sweating Friday with relief hoped for after the official mercury reached a new season's high.

Hottest day of 1945 was Thursday, Weather Observer Roy Hawkes reported. The high mark for the day was 92. The mercury did not drop much during the night, the lowest recording being 75 degrees.

Some relief was felt by those who remembered that the same date a year ago the thermometer climbed to 100 degrees.

"Continued warm" was the forecast issued by the weatherman for tonight but he promised partly cloudy and cooler weather Saturday.

London Government Scores Warsaw Setup As U. S. Approval Nears

LONDON, June 29—The Polish government in exile here said in an official statement today that Meclaw Thugutt would not accept a ministry in the new Polish provisional government of national unity in Warsaw to which he was named yesterday.

Thugutt, peasant party leader and son of a former vice premier of Poland, was appointed minister of posts, telephones and telegraph in the Warsaw government.

"Mr. Thugutt states that he has not accepted the post, and does not contemplate leaving London for Warsaw," an official statement said.

A spokesman of the London government denounced the Warsaw government as "communist controlled, pure and simple." He charged that only seven of 21 cabinet posts went to non-communists.

SENATOR REPORTS JAP PEACE OFFER

WASHINGTON, June 29—Senator Homer E. Capehart, R., Ind., said today he had been informed that the Japanese had made a peace offer which "would be acceptable to me."

Capehart declined to give details or reveal the source of his information. He said, however, he considered his informant "reliable."

"I think if a peace offer has been made the people should know about it," Capehart said. "If none has been made it would be simple for the government to say so."

House Plans To Approve Succession Bill Today; Senate May Kill Measure

WASHINGTON, June 29—The house expects to approve legislation today to revise the presidential succession law in line with the recommendations of President Truman.

Despite indications that the bill faced probable defeat in the senate the house scheduled a vote on the measure sponsored by Chairman Hatton W. Summers, D., Tex., of the house judiciary committee.

Sumner's bill followed without deviation Mr. Truman's proposal that the speaker of the house and the president pro tem of the senate be in line after the vice president for a vacancy in the office of President.

Under the present law, enacted in 1886, the succession passes from the vice president to the secretary of state and other cabinet members. Since the secretary of state's office now is temporarily vacant, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau is at present next in line to Mr. Truman. Sumner's bill would put Speaker Sam Rayburn, D., Tex., and Senate President Kenneth McKellar, D., Tenn., in line in that order.

Although the bill is expected to receive substantial Republican support Rep. Clarence E. Hancock of New York, ranking GOP member of the judiciary committee, said there would be at least some critical observations from the minority side.

Hancock said the bill had been brought before the house "prematurely" without hearings by the judiciary committee and that "serious constitutional questions" had been raised.

He suggested that speedy house action would contrast with the long debates which preceded enactment of the 1886 law. One constitutional issue in the bill involves the question of whether the speaker is an "officer" of the government. The constitution stipulates that the line of succession must pass to "officers" of the government.

Hancock said he also doubted the constitutionality of a provision in the Summers' bill calling for a special presidential election if both the president and vice president were removed through death or disqualification more than 90 days before an "off-year" congressional election.

Sumner's bill would provide for the selection of a president at that election to fill the two-year unexpired term. It was understood an amendment would be offered to strike the provision from the bill.

One senate objection to the measure has been based on the possibility that the Republicans might win control of the house in 1947 and elect a Republican speaker who would be next in line for the presidency.

Some Democratic senators also have been cool to the measure because they expected James T. Byrnes to be nominated for secretary of state. They wanted to retain the present law so he would be Mr. Truman's potential successor.

With obvious emotion as he stood in academic cap and gown before an audience of 10,000 in the municipal auditorium here, the (Continued on Page Two)

CIVILIAN JEEPS TO GO ON SALE DURING AUGUST

TOLEDO, June 29—The long-awaited civilian version of the jeep will start to roll off the assembly line of the Willys-Overland Motors plant at the rate of 3,000 to 4,000 a month beginning in August, Charles E. Sorenson, president, has announced.

Sorenson's statement followed a War Production Board order giving an immediate go-ahead signal to the motor industry to manufacture trucks and assigning production quotas to individual companies.

Sorenson said it was difficult to classify the civilian jeep since it combines the basic foundation of the truck passenger car, tractor and mobile power unit.

"It is in reality a new and revolutionary type of motor vehicle with no prewar precedent," he said.

NIPS MAKING MORE PLANS TO FIGHT LONG WAR

Mounting Fear Of Invasion Revealed By Report U. S. Paratroops In Aleutians

OIL BEING RECOVERED

Allies Getting Back Fuel Japs Stole In 1941; To Power Invasion

By United Press

Tokyo today reported a mass movement of Japanese industry from bomb battered and invasion threatened Japan to Manchuria in a redeployment plan aimed at laying new foundations for fighting a long war.

Japan's mounting fear of invasion was reflected in a Tokyo report that U. S. parachute and mountain troops had been moved into the Aleutians. Japanese broadcasters coupled with the report a warning that Japan might be attacked from the north as well as the south.

American superforts struck another powerful blow in the strategic reduction Japan's homeland war potential today. Some 450 to 500 of the big bombers crashed more than 3,000 tons of fire bombs into a South Japanese naval base, two seaports and a training center in a pre-dawn attack.

The Japanese, describing the air battle over Kyushu as the curtain raiser to the decisive battle of Japan, said the Americans already were attacking from 10 air fields on newly captured Okinawa. Alarms sound on Kyushu often more than 50 times a day, they said, and it was feared that a further step would keep the island in a state of alarm constantly.

After today's superbort fleets struck a single B-29 attacked southeast Hokkaido, Tokyo said. The enemy radio claimed that Japanese fighters badly damaged the bomber.

Radio Tokyo said Japanese industrial plans were being shifted from the homeland to Manchuria on a big scale. By this means, it added, the Japanese hoped to set up a defense system to withstand a long war and to provide the means for seizing the initiative when possible.

The transfer to Manchuria was described as even more vital to Japan's war effort than the dispersal of war industries on the home islands in an attempt to escape American air raids.

The Japanese lamented the inroads on their shipping by the tightening blockade. They said the best possible use of their remaining sea transport was a key cog in the whole war problem and a major factor in the industrial move to the continent.

Indicating that the transfer already had begun, the Japanese said that the main weight of industrial production in Manchuria already had been turned to the output of weapons.

Tokyo hinted at a swelling tide of resistance in occupied territories on the continent. A broadcast conceded that "lack of political coordination" had hampered Japanese efforts there.

WOMAN, 80, KILLS HUSBAND WITH CARVING KNIFE

NEW YORK, June 29—Grandmotherly Mrs. Mary Guerin, 80, pleaded with police today to let her attend the funeral of her 78-year-old husband, Thomas, whom she was accused of killing with a carving knife because she disapproved of his drinking.

Mrs. Guerin was held without bail on a homicide charge. Arraignment proceedings were resumed today before Magistrate William A. Farrell.

Mrs. Guerin told police she and her husband had been happily married for 50 years. Neighbors said they were seen frequently walking arm in arm along the street. She said Guerin, a sanitation department pensioner who had recently taken a job as a porter, had been drinking for 10 days.

"I don't care what happens to me after the funeral," Mrs. Guerin said.

NIPS MAKING MORE PLANS TO FIGHT LONG WAR

Mounting Fear Of Invasion Revealed By Report U. S. Paratroops In Aleutians

age to major installations in the latest bombardment of Japan, but said the resulting fires were brought under control this morning.

On tiny Tarakan island the Allies today began getting back the oil the Japanese stole in 1941—the oil needed now to power an invasion of Japan.

As the pumps on Tarakan began to spout rich, black oil, which can be piped right into ships without refining, Tokyo continued to fear an imminent invasion of the oil lands around Balikpapan on Borneo's east coast.

The Japanese reported that the three-weeks' long naval bombardment of Balikpapan continued, and that minesweepers still were operating in the bay there.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters at Manila confirmed that the 7th U. S. fleet, led by Admiral Thomas C. Kinkaid, was on the prowl in the Macassar strait between Borneo and Celebes. The MacArthur communiqué said the fleet had destroyed three enemy planes.

The Japanese today claimed the sinking of another destroyer off Balikpapan. Earlier this week they reported one allied cruiser sunk and another damaged there.

It was in Macassar strait that the U. S. Navy and the Japanese fought a bitter battle in January, 1942, when the enemy was on his way to invade Java.

Navy planes based on Okinawa continued the blockade of the homeland with attacks which resulted in eight enemy vessels sunk and eight more damaged in Korean and home waters.

Other planes from Okinawa sank two luggers in the Sakishima Islands southwest of Okinawa and damaged five vessels at Kakeroma in the Amami Islands to the north of Okinawa. Both the Sakishimas and the Amami Islands are other points where the Japanese fear an invasion, according to recent enemy broadcasts.

Opposite Okinawa on the Chinese mainland, the Chinese army continued biting chunks from enemy-held territory. Chungking today reported that Chinese troops had captured one of the three airfields at Luichow, where the 14th airforce operated until last November. Dispatches did not make it clear immediately, but it appeared that the airfield taken was the important one to the southwest of the city, the one the 14th's bombers used.

MacArthur's headquarters at Manila disclosed that the 93rd negro infantry divisions shortly would be deployed forward to the Philippines. Apparently the move was designed to relieve other units for rests and for action after that.

The dirty job of mopping up the remaining enemy positions in the hills of northern Luzon was underway. The sixth division, which has had a tough fight on its hands for two weeks, inched forward 400 yards toward the enemy strongpoint of Bolog, west of highway four.

Far eastern air forces' bombers and fighters dumped 286 tons of bombs on enemy installations at Balikpapan and Pointianak on Borneo, and another of the continuous raids on Formosa was made.

SERVICE PLANNED

A special patriotic service is being planned for Sunday at 10:30 a. m. at the First Methodist church. The Rev. Clarence Swearingen will use a patriotic theme in his sermon.

New Story Of Heroism Is Revealed

Thomas, 20, EM3/c, Larchmont, N. Y., with saving the ship from almost certain destruction.

Thomas stuck to his 20 millimeter gun post, firing steadily until the suicide plane crashed within 20 feet of his gun mount. He has been recommended for the Navy cross.

The "kamikaze" (divine wind boy), flying in tight formation, were sighted just before dusk on the evening of May 13, McMahan said.

A half hour later, at 7:15 p. m., the Bright's crew knew they were in for an attack when a Jap plane broke formation and dived at the tiny destroyer escort, coming abreast of the ship's portside at about 300 feet.

"Our 40 millimeter guns brought the fighter into fire, scoring hits on the plane's engine and left wing and forcing the pilot to divert from his course to the fantail of the ship," McMahan related.

"Thomas' following point-blank fire caused the plane to roll crazily and fall toward our stern," he said.

"At about 750 yards the fighter burst into flames, the port wing falling off, causing it to finally crash directly astern with the remaining portion of the wing hitting an empty depth charge rack."

The wreckage tore through the rudder, causing the ship to circle helplessly, McMahan said.

Seaman 1/c Gardner Gibson, Caney, Ky., received special recognition for his ingenuity in repairing the ship's damage parts nearly 100 per cent. Gibson led a work party which set up the emergency steering device which enabled the Bright to reach port.

Heroic rescue work by Phm 2/c James Johnson, Baltimore, Md., in rescuing shipmates while the ship was still under attack, led the ship's skipper to recommend him for a citation.

Other members of the crew who brought shipmates from twisted and molten machinery of the engine room were Mack Paluch, Cm-mm, Masontown, Pa., Prentiss Marshall, Wt 1/c, Johnson, Vt., Paul Potter, Cm-mm, St. Louis, Mo., and Lt. Fletcher Seymour, Elbourne, Ill.

"The Bright wasn't a big ship and she may not loom as a major figure in heroic stories of World War II naval warfare," McMahan admitted. "But she'll be remembered for guts and Irish luck."

POLES EXPECT QUICK APPROVAL

States and Great Britain was a guarantee that it will conduct "free and unfettered" elections.

Once such formal notification has been received from Warsaw, the United States and Britain will in joint or parallel actions withdraw recognition from the rival Polish exile government in London in favor of the new government.

In Moscow an official Tass news agency dispatch from Warsaw said American and British recognition of the new Polish government was expected soon.

Julius Sakowski, vice minister of information in the London regime, said his government and the greater part of its army of 250,000 men would remain in the United Kingdom at least until the fate of the army had been determined.

He categorically denied reports published in London morning newspapers that the exile government was planning to move to Dublin or Montreal and was seeking Vatican aid to do so.

"This government has not approached the Vatican," Sakowski said. "It has no plans to go to Elre or Canada or anywhere else."

NAZIS PLANNED ROCKET RAIDS ON U. S. CITIES

PARIS, June 29—The Nazis were perfecting a method of launching V-2 rockets from submarines for attacks on American seaboard cities in the closing days of the war, it was learned today.

A dispatch from United Press Correspondent Robert Musel in Bremen indicated that the Germans had given data on their V-weapon experiments to the Japanese. Whether the submarine technique was included in the material sent to Japan was not known.

"However," an American investigator said, "the Germans have an extremely low opinion of the Japanese ever getting V-weapons into the tactical or strategic stage."

The experiments on submarine launching of rockets were uncovered by the 80th division in the Austrian Alps after chance remarks by a small boy and an old man led to the discovery of an elaborate laboratory it was learned here.

ever be another or a better start

"We dare not fail to try. We dare not fail to strive in this direction no matter how far we fall short of the goal."

To those who would protest that some charter signatories practice the opposite of what they preach, Vandenberg said it only proved the greatness of the need for such an instrument "which promises at least to try to stem these evil tides."

Against the argument that the treaty shouldn't be ratified before the final peace terms are decided, Vandenberg contended that a strong organization would help in the justness of the peace terms.

Pointing out that the final draft permits the general assembly to "recommend measures for peaceful settlement of any situation, regardless of origin, which it deems likely to impair the general welfare," Vandenberg said:

"I submit that justice is infinitely better off with such a forum than it would be if such a forum were refused. I suggest that the more one fears the nature of the final peace, speaking not of our enemies but of our friends, the warmer should be one's welcome to an institution which can promise some element of orderly correction."

Under such circumstances, he said, "the quicker this institution begins to function the quicker justice may hope to find its voice and mobilize its friends."

Vandenberg also undertook to answer the argument that the charter is nothing more than a three-power military alliance among Britain, the United States and Russia.

"So far as peace enforcement is concerned, I agree that there is substance to this contention," he said. "But I hasten to assert that so far as force is concerned, the world is at the mercy of Russia, Great Britain and the United States regardless of whether we form this league or not. Those happen to be the facts of life."

But, he argued, the world would be more at the mercy of those powerful forces without a charter than it would be with it.

"Without the charter there is no curb upon these great military powers except rivalry between them—and military rivalry has never yet been the harbinger of peace."

"With the charter there is at least the restraint of a peaceful contract, for whatever that may be worth, and the grim assurance that the aggressor who breaks this contract will stand in naked infamy before the embattled conscience of an outraged world."

He stressed that a signature on the charter carried with it grave responsibilities for preserving the peace, particularly on the major powers strong enough to make a war.

"You may say this will not work," he declared. "I answer that I do not know; but I think it will, at least so long as this charter holds the major powers in har-

NEW SUBSIDY TO KEEP LAMBS OFF MARKET PLANNED

WASHINGTON, June 29—The government is considering a new subsidy to lamb producers, not to bring lambs to market but to keep them off, it was learned today.

This may seem strange in days of meat shortages but the producers say they can't meet costs at present ceiling prices. As a result they are selling off flocks at record rates and jeopardizing the future lamb supply.

Consumers might suffer a temporary new cut in their meat supply if the subsidy were approved. But officials said they would profit in the long run. With flocks built up again, more lambs would be produced for market next year and the year after.

The subsidy would be paid to producers for all lambs marketed. Officials have not yet agreed on the amount but $1 per 100 pounds was one figure suggested.

Deaths and Funerals

BELL SERVICES

Funeral services for Thomas Bell who died Thursday, will be conducted Saturday 2:30 p. m. at the Deffenbaugh chapel. The Rev. Carl Kennedy, of the Presbyterian church, of which Mr. Bell was a member, will officiate.

Burial will be in Forest cemetery. Friends may call at the Deffenbaugh chapel.

Members of the Elks club will call in a body at the chapel, Friday evening 8 p. m.

WARNER FUNERAL

Funeral arrangements for Andrew Warner were completed Friday. Mr. Warner died in Grant hospital, Columbus, early Thursday morning after several months of illness.

Funeral services for the late Thatcher farmer will be conducted at the Morris United Brethren church Monday at 2 p. m. The Rev. S. C. Elsie and the Rev. F. E. Dunn will conduct the services.

Friends may call at the home in Thatcher after Saturday noon. Burial by the L. E. Hill funeral home will be at Forest cemetery.

mony. I answer that I propose to try the only chance."

He said that if the time ever came when the big powers no longer lived in harmony, no pact could prevent war.

He said the veto power accorded the big powers was practical and desirable because:

1. It substantially reflects the world's realities.
2. The so-called special privilege of the great powers is matched by equivalent special responsibilities.
3. There is no alternative basis upon which to launch this great adventure.

J. Lausche was needed to give the local governments a $4,000,000 a year increase. Lausche was certain to approve the bill since it was the same as his recommendation.

The house yesterday passed 10 bills, including three emergency measures, in the final rush to complete action on pending legislation. The senate approved 27 other bills, including two emergency measures.

Defeated by the house, however, was an emergency bill to permit the governor to make temporary appointments to the state board of liquor control in case of the illness of two or more members. The vote was 89-26, two votes short of a two-thirds majority.

Also approved by the house were senate-approved emergency measures to permit political subdivisions to impose tax levies in excess of the 10-mill limitation for capital improvements and to impose additional levies to retire bonds for capital improvements.

The senate approved two emergency house bills to permit minors in the armed forces to take advantage of the GI bill of rights and to create a commission to study the needs of Ohio's returned war veterans and recommend legislation to the next assembly.

The senate also passed two house-approved conservation bills, one to increase the price of fishing licenses from 50 cents to $1 and the other to prohibit game warden from confiscating the guns of hunters found violating state game laws.

Another house bill which first was defeated by the senate and then passed by a vote of 22-0 upon reconsideration requires the approval of the state highway director for angle parking on state routes within a corporation.

Accidental deaths in Chicago decreased from 1,632 in 1943 to 1,518 in 1944, with 582 of the fatal accidents occurring in homes, due chiefly to falls.

BEN JOHNSON, POW 21 MONTHS, ARRIVES HOME

T/Sgt. Benjamin B. Johnson, son of Harry Johnson of 206 West Mill street is home on a sixty-day furlough after 21 months in a German prison camp. He served as radio operator on a B-17 of the 379th Bomber Group of the 8th Air Force.

He entered service April 21, 1942, went overseas in May, 1943. On August 16, 1943 while on the thirteenth mission bombing airfields north of Paris, his ship was attacked and set on fire. The side gunner was killed and the rest bailed out landing safely.

He was taken prisoner and moved to Stalag 7A at Moosburg where he remained six months. He was then transferred to 17B situated at Krems, Austria.

With the approach of the Russian Army, 4,500 prisoners in this camp were marched westward a distance of about 200 miles to Braunau where they were placed in a woods and held for a period of three weeks until released by General Patton's 3rd Army.

He received the Air Medal and two Oak Leaf Clusters. Prior to his entry in service he was employed at the Container Corporation.

At the end of his furlough he will report to Miami Beach, Florida for re-assignment.

LOCAL OFFICERS JOIN IN HUNT FOR 'RUSTLERS'

Pickaway, Ross and Vinton county sheriff's officers and State Highway Patrolmen were investigating an attempted cattle theft Friday.

The theft which was interrupted Thursday on a farm north of Wellston is the second instance of preying upon livestock in this area in a week.

Seven men, one identified as wearing an Army uniform, attempted to steal a half-grown steer but were stopped by the farm-owners' hired man who asked them what they were attempting to do. The report states that they told him it was none of his business and pulled a shot gun on the hired man.

While this interruption was taking place the steer escaped. The seven men got into their automobile and escaped. There was no license tag on the auto the hired man said.

Early last week S. B. Mark, Ross county sheriff, investigated the killing and butchering of two full grown steers on a farm in his county. The cattle-killers had removed the fore and hind quarters of two steers and left the remains in a woods on the Ross county farm.

NIPS MAKING MORE PLANS TO FIGHT LONG WAR

age to major installations in the latest bombardment of Japan, but said the resulting fires were brought under control this morning.

On tiny Tarakan island the Allies today began getting back the oil the Japanese stole in 1941—the oil needed now to power an invasion of Japan.

As the pumps on Tarakan began to spout rich, black oil, which can be piped right into ships without refining, Tokyo continued to fear an imminent invasion of the oil lands around Balikpapan on Borneo's east coast.

The Japanese reported that the three-weeks' long naval bombardment of Balikpapan continued, and that minesweepers still were operating in the bay there.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters at Manila confirmed that the 7th U. S. fleet, led by Admiral Thomas C. Kinkaid, was on the prowl in the Macassar strait between Borneo and Celebes. The MacArthur communique said the fleet had destroyed three enemy planes.

The Japanese today claimed the sinking of another destroyer off Balikpapan. Earlier this week they reported one allied cruiser sunk and another damaged there.

It was in Macassar strait that the U. S. Navy and the Japanese fought a bitter battle in January, 1942, when the enemy was on his way to invade Java.

Navy planes based on Okinawa continued the blockade of the homeland with attacks which resulted in eight enemy vessels sunk and eight more damaged in Korean and home waters.

Other planes from Okinawa sank two barges in the Sakishima islands southwest of Okinawa and damaged five vessels at Kakeroma in the Amami islands to the north of Okinawa. Both the Sakishimas and the Amami islands are other points where the Japanese fear an invasion, according to recent enemy broadcasts.

Opposite Okinawa on the Chinese mainland, the Chinese army continued hitting chunks from enemy-held territory. Chungking today reported that Chinese troops had captured one of the three airfields at Luichow, where the 14th airforce operated until last November. Dispatches did not make it clear immediately, but it appeared that the airfield taken was the important one to the southwest of the city, the one the 14th's bombers used.

MacArthur's headquarters at Manila disclosed that the 93rd negro infantry divisions shortly would be deployed forward to the Philippines. Apparently the move was designed to relieve other units for rests and for action after that.

The dirty job of mopping up the remaining enemy positions in the hills of northern Luzon was underway. The sixth division, which had a tough fight on its hands for two weeks, inched forward 400 yards toward the enemy stronghold of Bolog, west of highway four.

Far eastern air forces' bombers and fighters dumped 286 tons of bombs on enemy installations at Balikpapan and Pointianak on Borneo, and another of the continuous raids on Formosa was made.

SERVICE PLANNED

A special patriotic service is being planned for Sunday at 10:30 a. m. at the First Methodist church. The Rev. Clarence Swearingin will use a patriotic theme in his sermon.

New Story Of Heroism Is Revealed

Thomas, 20, EM3/c, Larchmont, N. Y., with saving the ship from almost certain destruction.

Thomas stuck to his 20 millimeter gun post, firing steadily until the suicide plane crashed within 20 feet of his gun mount. He has been recommended for the Navy cross.

The "kamikaze" (divine wind boy), flying in tight formation, were sighted just before dusk on the evening of May 13, McMahan said.

A half hour later, at 7:15 p. m., the Bright's crew knew they were in for an attack when a Jap plane broke formation and dived at the tiny destroyer escort, coming abreast of the ship's portside at about 300 feet.

"Our 40 millimeter guns brought the fighter into fire, scoring hits on the plane's engine and left wing and forcing the pilot to divert from his course to the fantail of the ship," McMahan related.

"Thomas' following point-blank fire caused the plane to roll crazily and fall toward our stern," he said.

"At about 750 yards the fighter burst into flames, the port wing falling off, causing it to finally crash directly astern with the remaining portion of the wing hitting an empty depth charge rack."

The wreckage tore through the rudder, causing the ship to circle helplessly, McMahan said.

Seaman 1/c Gardner Gibson, Caney, Ky., received special recognition for his ingenuity in repairing the ship's damage parts nearly 100 per cent. Gibson led a work party which set up the emergency steering device which enabled the Bright to reach port.

Heroic rescue work by Port 2/c James Johnson, Baltimore, Md., in rescuing shipmates while the ship was still under attack, led the ship's skipper to recommend him for a citation.

Other members of the crew who brought shipmates from twisted and molten machinery of the engine room were Mack Paluch, Cm-6mm, Masontown, Pa., Prentiss Marshall, Wt 1/c, Johnson, Vt., Paul Potter, Cm-6mm, St. Louis, Mo., and L. Fletcher Seymour, Elbourne, Ill.

"The Bright wasn't a big ship and she may not loom as a major figure in heroic stories of World War II naval warfare," McMahan admitted. "But she'll be remembered for guts and Irish luck."

POLES EXPECT QUICK APPROVAL

States and Great Britain was a guarantee that it will conduct "free and unfettered" elections.

Once such formal notification has been received from Warsaw, the United States and Britain will in joint or parallel actions withdraw recognition from the rival Polish exile government in London in favor of the new government.

In Moscow an official Tass news agency dispatch from Warsaw said American and British recognition of the new Polish government was expected soon.

Julius Sakowski, vice minister of information in the London regime said his government and the greater part of its army of 250,000 men would remain in the United Kingdom at least until the fate of the army had been determined.

He categorically denied reports published in London morning newspapers that the exile government was planning to move to Dublin or Montreal and was seeking Vatican aid to do so.

"This government has not approached the Vatican," Sakowski said. "It has no plans to go to Eire or Canada or anywhere else."

NAZIS PLANNED ROCKET RAIDS ON U. S. CITIES

PARIS, June 29—The Nazis were perfecting a method of launching V-2 rockets from submarines for attacks on American seaboard cities in the closing days of the war, it was learned today.

A dispatch from United Press Correspondent Robert Musel in Bremen indicated that the Germans had given data on their V-weapon experiments to the Japanese.

Whether the submarine technique was included in the material sent to Japan was not known.

"However," an American investigator said, "the Germans have an extremely low opinion of the Japanese ever getting V-weapons into the tactical or strategic stage."

The experiments on submarine launching of rockets were uncovered by the 80th division in the Austrian Alps after chance remarks by a small boy and an old man led to the discovery of an elaborate laboratory it was learned here.

ever be another or a better start

"We dare not fail to try. We dare not fail to strive in this direction no matter how far we fall short of the goal."

To those who would protest that some charter signatories practice the opposite of what they preach, Vandenberg said it only proved the greatness of the need for such an instrument "which promises at least to try to stem these evil tides."

Against the argument that the treaty shouldn't be ratified before the final peace terms are decided, Vandenberg contended that a strong organization would help in the justness of the peace terms.

Pointing out that the final draft permits the general assembly to "recommend measures for peaceful settlement of any situation, regardless of origin, which it deems likely to impair the general welfare," Vandenberg said:

"I submit that justice is infinitely better off with such a forum than it would be if such a forum were refused. I suggest that the more one fears the nature of the final peace, speaking not of our enemies but of our friends, the warmer should be one's welcome to an institution which can promise some element of orderly correction."

Under such circumstances, he said, "the quicker this institution begins to function the quicker justice may hope to find its voice and mobilize its friends."

Vandenberg also undertook to answer the argument that the charter is nothing more than a three-power military alliance among Britain, the United States and Russia.

"So far as peace enforcement is concerned, I agree that there is substance to this contention," he said. "But I hasten to assert that so far as force is concerned, the world is at the mercy of Russia, Great Britain and the United States regardless of whether we form this league or not. Those happen to be the facts of life."

But, he argued, the world would be more at the mercy of those powerful forces without a charter than it would be with it.

"Without the charter there is no curb upon these great military powers except rivalry between them—and military rivalry has never yet been the harbinger of peace."

"With the charter there is at least the restraint of a peaceful contract, for whatever that may be worth, and the grim assurance that the aggressor who breaks this contract will stand in naked infamy before the embattled conscience of an outraged world."

He stressed that a signature on the charter carried with it grave responsibilities for preserving the peace, particularly on the major powers strong enough to make a war.

"You may say this will not work," he declared. "I answer that I do not know; but I think it will, at least so long as this charter holds the major powers in harmony."

NEW SUBSIDY TO KEEP LAMBS OFF MARKET PLANNED

WASHINGTON, June 29—The government is considering a new subsidy to lamb producers, not to bring lambs to market but to keep them off, it was learned today.

This may seem strange in days of meat shortages but the producers say they can't meet costs at present ceiling prices. As a result they are selling off flocks at record rates and jeopardizing the future lamb supply.

Consumers might suffer a temporary new cut in their meat supply if the subsidy were approved. But officials said they would profit in the long run. With flocks built up again, more lambs would be produced for market next year and the year after.

The subsidy would be paid to producers for all lambs marketed. Officials have not yet agreed on the amount but $1 per 100 pounds was one figure suggested.

J. Lausche was needed to give the local governments a $4,000,000 a year increase. Lausche was certain to approve the bill since it was the same as his recommendation.

The house yesterday passed 10 bills, including three emergency measures, in the final rush to complete action on pending legislation. The senate approved 27 other bills, including two emergency measures.

Defeated by the house, however, was an emergency bill to permit the governor to make temporary appointments to the state board of liquor control in case of the illness of two or more members. The vote was 89-26, two votes short of a two-thirds majority.

Also approved by the house were senate-approved emergency measures to permit political subdivisions to impose tax levies in excess of the 10-mill limitation for capital improvements and to impose additional levies to retire bonds for capital improvements.

The senate approved two emergency house bills to permit minors in the armed forces to take advantage of the GI bill of rights and to create a commission to study the needs of Ohio's returned war veterans and recommend legislation to the next assembly.

The senate also passed two house-approved conservation bills, one to increase the price of fishing licenses from 50 cents to $1 and the other to prohibit game wardens from confiscating the guns of hunters found violating state game laws.

Another house bill which first was defeated by the senate and then passed by a vote of 22-0 upon reconsideration requires the approval of the state highway director for angle parking on state routes within a corporation.

BEN JOHNSON, POW 21 MONTHS, ARRIVES HOME

T/Sgt. Benjamin B. Johnson, son of Harry Johnson of 206 West Mill street is home on a sixty-day furlough after 21 months in a German prison camp. He served as radio operator on a B-17 of the 379th Bomber Group of the 8th Air Force.

He entered service April 21, 1942, went overseas in May, 1943. On August 16, 1943 while on the thirteenth mission bombing airfields north of Paris, his ship was attacked and set on fire. The side gunner was killed and the rest bailed out landing safely.

He was taken prisoner and moved to Stalag 7A at Moosburg where he remained six months. He was then transferred to 17B situated at Krems, Austria.

With the approach of the Russian Army, 4,500 prisoners in this camp were marched westward a distance of about 200 miles to Braunau where they were placed in a woods and held for a period of three weeks until released by General Patton's 3rd Army.

He received the Air Medal and two Oak Leaf Clusters. Prior to his entry in service he was employed at the Container Corporation.

At the end of his furlough he will report to Miami Beach, Florida for re-assignment.

LOCAL OFFICERS JOIN IN HUNT FOR 'RUSTLERS'

Pickaway, Ross and Vinton county sheriff's officers and State Highway Patrolmen were investigating an attempted cattle theft Friday.

The theft which was interrupted Thursday on a farm north of Wellston is the second instance of preying upon livestock in this area in a week.

Seven men, one identified as wearing an Army uniform, attempted to steal a half-grown steer but were stopped by the farm-owners' hired man who asked them what they were attempting to do. The report states that they told him it was none of his business and pulled a shot gun on the hired man.

While this interruption was taking place the steer escaped. The seven men got into their automobile and escaped. There was no license tag on the auto the hired man said.

Early last week S. B. Mark, Ross county sheriff, investigated the killing and butchering of two full grown steers on a farm in his county. The cattle-killers had removed the fore and hind quarters of two steers and left the remains in a woods on the Ross county farm.

President said this nation faced the "distasteful task" of realizing the necessity of learning that it must "live with the world as a whole, and not by itself."

The President sends the charter to the senate Monday, the same day he nominates a new secretary of state, and he was expected to accompany the charter with a message along the lines of the talk he had with his homefolks last night. The President still is undecided whether to deliver the charter in person.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

June 28, 1945

To The Editor:

I am happy to write you and write on a subject which is of extreme importance to every American. I do not believe that a writer or speaker has ever had an opportunity to write on a better topic than I am to discuss, and certainly no one could have greater confidence in which he is to say than I have today.

I am writing you today to speak on the subject of United States War Bonds. This is a subject which you must agree is worthy of every American's interest and attention. As for having confidence in what I am about to urge you to do, I feel that I can without hesitation urge you to buy United States War Bonds to the utmost limit of your financial ability. This is the best sound economic advice I can give you, because when you buy U. S. War Bonds you are not only making the finest investment to be had in the world today but you are helping to maintain your freedom, your liberty and your independence.

So far our government has only one means by which American citizens may voluntarily help finance the cost of the war.

This means is through the purchase of War Bonds. This is only means open to use to invest our money in America and assist in the war effort. For this reason every patriotic American should buy as much as he can of stamps and bonds and invest as heavily as he is able in our country. It is the most secure, wise and profitable investment which can be found anywhere in the world today.

It is an investment which puts your dollars to work building up the defense of our nation and the things which we hold dear.

• A BETTER PLACE TO BUY •
LUMBER AND BUILDING MATERIAL
WE'LL GET THE RIGHT THING FOR THE RIGHT PLACE

From a strictly business point of view, too, I would like to point out the advantages of investing as much of your money as possible in War Bonds. As I have said this is the only way our government has of getting voluntary financial help to carry on the war. However, our government has many other ways of raising money for this purpose, chiefly through taxes of different types.

We all know that it is going to take a great deal of money to fight this war and to defeat our powerful enemies. Furthermore, we know that what our government fails to get through voluntary purchases of War Bonds it will obtain from different forms of taxation.

The money will be raised and will be spent and our country will fight this war and Win. Of this we are all convinced.

It doesn't take much business sagacity to realize that the more money that flows into the government through purchase of War Bonds the less will be required in the form of taxation. If you believe it is better to invest your money in bonds to help the government rather than contribute this money in taxes, then by all means invest in these bonds to the limit of your purse.

It is not necessary to purchase a bond all at once. You can buy stamps in small denominations and keep saving these stamps until you have enough of them to turn in for a bond.

In this war every one of us must expect to make certain sacrifices and to serve our country. There are many ways in which we can serve and will have to serve before this war is over.

There is one way in which all of us can serve, regardless of age, occupation or physical condition. This way is through the purchase of U. S. War Bonds. Through the purchase of these bonds we are providing the money which our government needs to buy weapons necessary to destroy our enemies.

To win the war we must buy War Bonds regularly—buy and keep buying them all the time. In this way we can keep our money rolling into the government fund so that tanks, battleships and airplanes can keep rolling off the production lines.

So Save Today for a Safe Tomorrow.

Sincerely,
Fred C. Clark.

LEAFLETS DROPPED ON JAPAN BY SUPERFORTS

THESE ILLUSTRATIONS are included in many which are being dropped on Japan during Superfortress raids. At left, Uncle Sam stands above a Jap military leader with bombs and planes. The message on the back says in part: "The Gumbatsu (military clique) miscalculated America's fighting strength." At center, the message states that the Gumbatsu is pulling down the nation. At right, the picture of a Jap feudal warrior combating U. S. planes contains a message from a Nipponese sergeant. Air Forces sketches. (International)

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

June 28, 1945

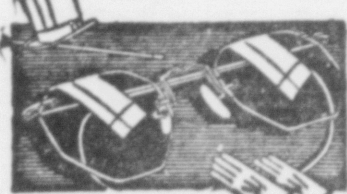

To The Editor:

I am happy to write you and write on a subject which is of extreme importance to every American. I do not believe that a writer or speaker has ever had an opportunity to write on a better topic than I am to discuss, and certainly no one could have greater confidence in which he is to say than I have today.

I am writing you today to speak on the subject of United States War Bonds. This is a subject which you must agree is worthy of every American's interest and attention. As for having confidence in what I am about to urge you to do, I feel that I can without hesitation urge you to buy United States War Bonds to the utmost limit of your financial ability. This is the best sound economic advice I can give you, because when you buy U. S. War Bonds you are not only making the finest investment to be had in the world today but you are helping to maintain your freedom.

your liberty and your independence.

So far our government has only one means by which American citizens may voluntarily help finance the cost of the war.

This means is through the purchase of War Bonds. This is only means open to use to invest our money in America and assist in the war effort. For this reason every patriotic American should buy as much as he can of stamps and bonds and invest as heavily as he is able in our country. It is the most secure, wise and profitable investment which can be found anywhere in the world today.

It is an investment which puts your dollars to work building up the defense of our nation and the things which we hold dear.

From a strictly business point of view, too, I would like to point out the advantages of investing as much of your money as possible in War Bonds. As I have said this is the only way our government has of getting voluntary financial help to carry on the war. However, our government has many other ways of raising money for this purpose, chiefly through taxes of different types.

We all know that it is going to take a great deal of money to fight this war and to defeat our powerful enemies. Furthermore, we know that what our government fails to get through voluntary purchases of War Bonds it will obtain from different forms of taxation.

The money will be raised and will be spent and our country will fight this war and win. Of this we are all convinced.

It doesn't take much business sagacity to realize that the more money that flows into the government through purchase of War Bonds the less will be required in the form of taxation. If you believe it is better to invest your money in bonds to help the government rather than contribute this money in taxes, then by all means invest in these bonds to the limit of your purse.

It is not necessary to purchase a bond all at once. You can buy stamps in small denominations and keep saving these stamps until you have enough of them to turn in for a bond.

In this war every one of us must expect to make certain sacrifices and to serve our country. There are many ways in which we can serve and will have to serve before this war is over.

There is one way in which all of us can serve, regardless of age, occupation or physical condition. This way is through the purchase of U. S. War Bonds. Through the purchase of these bonds we are providing the money which our government needs to buy weapons necessary to destroy our enemies.

To win the war we must buy War Bonds regularly—buy and keep buying them all the time. In this way we can keep our money rolling into the government fund so that tanks, battleships and airplanes can keep rolling off the production lines.

So Save Today for a Safe Tomorrow.

Sincerely,
Fred C. Clark.

BOUNDARIES OF IGNORANCE

It takes fortitude to become educated in this modern world. One has to be willing, not only to study and think, but to face the fact of how little he really knows. The truly ignorant man doesn't know of his ignorance. He is comfortable in his faith that the world is what he can take in with his senses. He is never disturbed by knowledge, of which he catches a glimpse but which is beyond his reach.

On the other hand, the man who would be educated must be brave enough to discover and face the boundaries of his own ignorance. He must always be a little distressed by having his imagination take him on expeditions beyond his means. But he will also be thrilled by these adventures of the mind.

The Nazis had one defense against knowledge. They staked out the territory according to the fuhrer's orders, and nobody had to strain his mind to penetrate the boundaries of official ignorance. In fact, such was forbidden under heavy penalty.

ENLIGHTENED OPINION

Of all the fetters that bind diplomacy," says Sir Victor Wellesley, a retired member of the British Foreign Office Staff, "none is heavier than public ignorance when brought into action." The chief reason for the impossibly high reparations demanded of Germany after the last war was that public opinion, not merely uninformed, but in addition misled by electioneering politicians (notably the British prime minister, David Lloyd George), insisted that the reparation figures be set far up in the billions.

To make the San Francisco agreement work is not a responsibility of the governments of the United Nations alone. Public opinion everywhere must cooperate to learn what should be insisted upon and what not. Discussion groups and enlightened newspaper comment can help present the true facts for study.

WAR DURATION

PROFESSIONAL prophets of war and industry have been saying that the war will continue for six months to a year. This doubtless gives enough lee-way for hedging.

It has to be remembered, however, that the Japanese are different from other nationalities in many ways, and often unpredictable. It may require Jap experts to handle the prophetic side of this war; and even then, probably some schools of Japanese prophecy will disagree with others.

Thus a reasonable conclusion is that the Jap war will be over when it is over. And even then, there may still a lot of Japs hiding in the bushes.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, June 29 — 'Twas said upon the airwaves and in print, Mr. Truman won his greatest victory over congress on the tariff cutting program.

It seems to me someone should have smelled something, if not a mouse, when 15 senate Republicans voted for the Democratic tariff bill. Unity has not yet developed in this world to the heavenly point that a Republican accepts a Democratic theory on this issue where their forefathers fought, bled and collected.

Men have won the President's chair (and lost it also) for their stand upon this one question alone. Nothing, including the Civil War (which was a phase of the tariff dispute between the foreign free-trading cotton growers and the New England textile manufacturers desirous of protection) has so deeply torn the political hearts of Americans.

But this time congress, with Republican votes, authorized a further slashing of 25 percent by the President singlehanded making 75 percent in all from the old high tariff rates) without advice or consent of congress—or the Republican national committee.

Yet, even Republican Senator Smith of industrial New Jersey voted for it, changing his mind in the last few days from his previously announced repugnance to such a threat to American industrialist, farmer and laborer from cheap foreign competition.

Indeed, the senate did not change the bill one whit from the house version, which caused revival of all the partisan fighting of ages, but it just said "yea" in a loud voice and sent it on to the President's desk, where he could victoriously find it upon his return from San Francisco.

The hint of these strange doings should have been sufficient warning that something was wrong, but if anyone reported it, I have not seen the report.

Any analyst, however, will be forced to conclude the victory was for enigmatism, more than for Truman. Just before the slashing authority passed the house (and in order to get it through), Mr. Truman sent a billet to his friend Speaker Sam Rayburn saying:

"I have had drawn to my attention statements to the effect that this increased authority might be used in such a way as to endanger or 'trade out' segments of American industry, American agriculture, or American labor. No such action was taken under President Roosevelt and Cordell Hull and no such action will take place under my presidency."

The only reason for a tariff rate, of course, is to protect some American industry, farm or worker from cheap production costs coming in competition from abroad. There are no tariffs on non-competitive products, no reason for any.

If there is to be no "danger" to domestic interests from tariff cutting, how can there be any tariff cutting—in fact, why was the subject ever mentioned, or the law passed?

To this question, no senator I have found has even a private answer. The only suggestion approaching an explanation is that Mr. Truman expects to horn in somehow on the German and Jap trade by some magic yet undisclosed, and it will have to be big magic because the Nazi and Jap cost of production was what made this trade possible (including electric light bulbs in our ten cent stores for half our cost of production).

DIET AND HEALTH

A Common Parasite And Its Symptoms

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M. D.

ONE would not ordinarily think of infestation with pinworms as a very serious disorder. However, this condition may be responsible for many disagreeable symptoms.

According to Doctor Wilfred N. Sisk of Asheville, North Carolina, pinworms may cause such symptoms as poor appetite, restlessness during sleep, nervousness, craving for sweets, itching about the lower opening of the bowel, pains in the abdomen, and nightmares. Poor appetite, which interferes with proper nutrition, is frequently the most serious symptom. Second in importance is the restlessness which disturbs the patient's rest.

Pinworms in Children

Usually, children who have pinworms are somewhat undernourished and underweight. Sometimes they have dark circles under the eyes. Frequently, there is anemia or lack of coloring in the blood. There may be a slight increase in the number of cells in the blood, known as eosinophils.

Pinworm infestation is quite frequent. Doctor Sisk believes that about one-fifth to one-third of the children in the lower economic groups may have this type of disturbance.

In recent times, not only has a new method of diagnosing pinworm infestation been discovered, but also an effective method of treatment. The method of diagnosis entails the use of a cellophane swab which is rubbed around the lower opening of the bowel, and then smeared on a glass slide. Then a search is made for the pinworm eggs.

Gentian Violet

In the new form of treatment, a drug known as gentian violet is employed. However, even with this new treatment, the condition is not an easy one to cure.

The pinworms lay their eggs outside the opening of the bowel. These eggs then get on the bedclothes as well as on the child's clothing. Thus, when one member of the family has the condition, it is likely to spread to other members of the family. It is a good plan in case one member of the family is found to have pinworms, to attempt to find them in the other members of the family.

Doctor Sisk thinks that several such tests should be carried out before it is decided that pinworm infestation is not present.

In the treatment with gentian violet, tablets of the drug are used. The tablets must be swallowed whole. Six tablets are given at intervals during each day for one week, then the treatment is stopped for a week, and then resumed for another week. Of course, children receive smaller amounts than do adults. The only objection to this form of treatment is that in some cases it causes sickness to the stomach and vomiting. Sometimes the sickness to the stomach may be so severe that the treatment has to be discontinued.

Another drug which is employed is one known as phenothiazine. However, nausea and vomiting as well as paleness and blood in the urine frequently occur with the use of this preparation. Hence, it may not be as useful as gentian violet.

Whenever a child shows any of the symptoms which appear to be due to pinworms, careful tests should be made to determine if such worms are present, and when found, treatment should be promptly carried out.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

O. A.:—Would you please tell me what causes the urine to have a strong ammonia odor and how to avoid it?

Answer:—The ammonia odor is no cause for concern. This is normal. If the odor is excessively strong it may indicate some infection of the bladder or kidneys. An examination of the urine would be helpful in determining if any abnormal condition is present.

J. F.:—For the past year I have been under treatment for lumbago. What could cause this condition?

Answer:—Lumbago merely means pain in the back. Such pains may come from a variety of disorders, such as arthritis of the spine, inflammation of the muscles, nerve disturbances, faulty posture and disorders within the abdomen. A complete study by an orthopedic specialist would be helpful in determining the cause of the trouble. Then it can be properly treated.

LOIS EBY AND JOHN C. FLEMING

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE
UNDER THE line of supple poplars a lacy pattern of sunlight and shadow fell across the brown dirt road. Terry and Raff rode their horses in silence.

Leaving the cool protection of the estancia trees and coming out to open fields, the sun was hot on their backs. Stretching boundlessly to the west, the sea of wire grass and thistle rippled in the wind. The line of the distant horizon was unbroken except for a legion of windmills that marched like gray skeletons to meet the sky.

Several times, as they rode side by side, Raff threw a furtive glance toward Terry. He noticed that the laughter had gone out of her eyes. He noticed, too, how lovely she was in the sunlight. A bright yellow scarf around her head, wisps of copper hair glinting like polished gold where the scarf didn't cover. The even tan of her skin, the strong classic features.

"Why so serious?" he asked rather abruptly.

Terry turned to smile at him. "I'm sorry," she said. "I guess I was just enjoying the quiet."

"It couldn't be you're carrying the torch for someone?"

Terry's first impulse was anger. Suddenly she thought better of it. She tried to keep her voice even. "You, of course," she smiled.

"You wouldn't be kidding me?"

Terry didn't answer right away and Raff looked at her seriously. "You're pretty fond of Brooks," he said.

Terry could feel the flush of color rise in her face.

"Everyone is fond of him," she said fiercely. "Aren't you?"

"Best friend I have," Raff said. "But it's a little different. I'm not a woman."

Terry had a wild impulse to turn her horse around and streak back to the estancia. She realized then how obvious that would be. She might as well scream from the house tops that she was in love with Brooks Kimberly. She suddenly remembered the barrier she had promised to build in her heart. If she were back in New York it would be different. There everything was fair in love and war; here, when a man had given his promise to marry, it held the same finality as marriage itself. Again she made a silent vow: to put Brooks out of her mind forever. She pulled herself from her mood, tossed her head toward Raff and cried, "Race you to the next windmill!"

With that she dug the heels of her riding boots into the horse's flanks as he lunged forward. The horses ran neck and neck, their hooves beating into the soft ground, the wind whistling past. A few yards from the windmill Terry leaned far over her horse's outstretched neck, gave him a last urge in the flank. He leaped and beat Raff's horse by a length. Terry drew rein and brought her horse to a stop. She leaned over and patted him affectionately on the neck. "Atta boy," she laughed. "You really can run!"

Raff walked his lathered pinto along side.

"It isn't fair, of course," he grinned.

"Why not?"

"Even horses fall under the spell of a beautiful woman! Old Bandido there hasn't moved that fast since he was a colt."

"Bandido! Is that his name?" Terry asked. "That's a nice name for a horse. What does it mean?"

"Outlaw," Raff said. "He used to be the best round-up horse on the place. He's too old for that now."

After their horses had cooled down a bit they started off at a walk.

"Where are we going?" Terry asked.

"To the old Vargo place," Raff said. "You've never been there. Ramon Vargo used to work for Brooks' father. When he got old he suffered from delusions of grandeur. The senior Kimberly thought a lot of him. Retired him on a small pension and built him this place. It's long been deserted now."

"Is that the place the peons refer to as 'Tonto Paraiso'?"

"That's right," Raff nodded. "It means fool's paradise. The old man thought that it was a great estancia. Three times the size of Windemere. Until he died he thought he was a very rich man."

"The peons have some superstitions about that place," Terry said, suddenly remembering. "Twice now little Pedro has said to me that Vargo rode last night. What do they mean by that?"

Raff threw back his head and laughed.

"They were all afraid of Vargo because he talked so crazy. Since then, when anything unpleasant happens that they can't explain, they blame it on poor old Vargo. They think that because they laughed at him when he was on earth, he comes back at night on horseback to tantalize them."

Terry pointed to a green island of trees on the far horizon.

"That's the place over there?"

"That's it," Raff said. "It's in a cedar grove, where it's cool and shady. A perfect place to have our picnic."

A few minutes more and they rode out of the glare of the noonday sun into the thick shade of the trees. They chose a grassy spot and Raff led the horses away and tied them, while Terry took packages of sandwiches and a thermos from the saddlebag Raff had handed down to her.

While they were eating Raff said, "These sandwiches are, what is it you say? super."

"I'll make a Yankee of you yet!" Terry laughed.

After they had finished eating they stretched out on the soft carpet of sweet smelling grass, their heads close together. Raff half turned. His hand reached out to touch Terry's arm.

"I wouldn't really make such a bad husband," he said.

Terry smiled. "On the contrary," she said. "I think you'd make a very good one."

"But not for you?"

She ruffled his blond, curly hair and looked at him a little wistfully. "I'm just not sure yet," she said.

"You want me to be sure?"

"I wouldn't want you any other way," Raff said. "I promise I won't mention it again. I'll know when you're sure."

They rode on then for several hours across the flat stretches of pampas. Sometimes cantering their horses briskly through the waist-high grass, sometimes walking then slowly so they could rest.

They saw a flaming sunset that sent a brilliant wash of orange, and finally a delicate shade of pink from distant Patagonia. They felt the sudden chill in the wind when the sun was gone. They saw a cold, bright moon rise in the sky. It was nine when they finally rode through the heavy darkness into the west gates of the estancia. Lights shown out from the great house, warm and welcoming.

As they stood at the door Raff put his arm around Terry's waist lightly and looked down at her face, a dull ivory oval in the shreds of moonlight.

"I'll be waiting for you," he said softly. "No matter how long it might be."

WHILE there may be an eagerness and urge to undertake some substantial and enduring work, with an eye to future security and endurance, and the energies are under compulsion, yet there may arise many minor difficulties, delays or disappointments, irksome and discouraging.

However, these may be temporary and annoying rather than significant, but keeping things well in hand and suppressing trivialities and ego, frustrations might be vanquished, and good spade work done.

Those whose birthday it is may have an instinctive desire to be up and doing, and accomplishing long-range objectives, yet may find themselves blocked by trivial and discouraging conditions, which should, however, be accepted as postponements rather than lasting frustrations.

Yielding to pettiness, quibbling, and ideas of self-importance, might defeat promising openings for real and far-reaching investments of time, energy and ideas on basic foundations.

A child born on this day will have energy and plans for good work and future security, but may be easily thwarted by petty setbacks or rival propositions.

North said after the deal that if South had answered his Blackwood 5-No Trumps bid with 6-Spades to show three kings, he would then have bid 7-No Trumps. But with only two of them shown by the 5-Hearts, he decided that the grand slam was safer in spades. He was certainly right, for only 12 tricks can be taken at No Trumps. An effort to squeeze out a 13th trick would have failed because West could have guarded

The only startling thing about this hand was a remark by a kibitzer, who was really the fifth member of the game and awaiting his turn to cut in again. At the time he was looking out of the window and had not seen any of the hands. He listened to the bidding, however, then turned to South and whispered.

"I'll bet you East hasn't a solitary card as high as a queen," he breathed. South would not take him, for West had shown with his overall just about all that could be out against such big hands as North and South held. As it developed, the kibitzer was more than right in his conjecture, for East did not have a card as high as a jack.

WASHINGTON—Newsmen assigned to the War department are irked at the efforts of Secretary Stimson to impose restraints on some of the "name" generals who have recently returned from Europe. The generals are potentially good copy—a commodity in growing scarcity about the Pentagon building.

First indication of the quasi-censorship came when Gen. Omar N. Bradley held a news conference. Bradley, next to Eisenhower, is the leading strategist on the western front. Despite his appointment as Veterans administrator, Stimson kept him to a historical account of the Battle of Germany.

Stimson barred all questions about the Veterans administration, a bureau of considerable concern to 11,000,000 servicemen and their families. Similarly, Stimson bottled up Gen. George S. Patton, although the questions involved no possible security.

When Eisenhower came to Washington, Stimson was absent from the news conference. "Ike" sounded off at length on what he thought should be done about war criminals. Stimson had previously halted Bradley from answering this one because it was a "question for the lawyers."

LOOK FOR MORE CONGRESSIONAL investigations to capture the headlines as the war against Japan draws to a close. High on the list will be the surplus property muddle.

The tip-off came from one prominent senator, who must remain anonymous, when Guy Gillette, former senator from Iowa, resigned as Surplus Property board chairman.

"I'm glad he got out," he said. "Guy is too nice a fellow to take the kicking around that board's going to get."

BOUNDARIES OF IGNORANCE

It takes fortitude to become educated in this modern world. One has to be willing, not only to study and think, but to face the fact of how little he really knows. The truly ignorant man doesn't know of his ignorance. He is comfortable in his faith that the world is what he can take in with his senses. He is never disturbed by knowledge, of which he catches a glimpse but which is beyond his reach.

On the other hand, the man who would be educated must be brave enough to discover and face the boundaries of his own ignorance. He must always be a little distressed by having his imagination take him on expeditions beyond his means. But he will also be thrilled by these adventures of the mind.

The Nazis had one defense against knowledge. They stayed out the territory according to the fuhrer's orders, and nobody had to strain his mind to penetrate the boundaries of official ignorance. In fact, such was forbidden under heavy penalty.

ENLIGHTENED OPINION

OF all the fetters that bind diplomacy," says Sir Victor Wellesley, a retired member of the British Foreign Office Staff, "none is heavier than public ignorance when brought into action." The chief reason for the impossibly high reparations demanded of Germany after the last war was that public opinion, not merely uninformed, but in addition misled by electioneering politicians (notably the British prime minister, David Lloyd George), insisted that the reparation figures be set far up in the billions.

To make the San Francisco agreement work is not a responsibility of the governments of the United Nations alone. Public opinion everywhere must cooperate to learn what should be insisted upon and what not. Discussion groups and enlightened newspaper comment can help present the true facts for study.

WAR DURATION

PROFESSIONAL prophets of war and industry have been saying that the war will continue for six months to a year. This doubtless gives enough lee-way for hedging.

It has to be remembered, however, that the Japanese are different from other nationalities in many ways, and often unpredictable. It may require Jap experts to handle the prophetic side of this war; and even then, probably some schools of Japanese prophecy will disagree with others.

Thus a reasonable conclusion is that the Jap war will be over when it is over. And even then, there may still a lot of Japs hiding in the bushes.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, June 29—"Twas said upon the airwaves and in print, Mr. Truman won his greatest victory over congress on the tariff cutting program.

It seems to me someone should have smelled something, if not a mouse, when 15 senate Republicans voted for the Democratic tariff bill. Unity has not yet developed in this world to the heavenly point that a Republican accepts a Democratic theory on this issue where their forefathers fought, bled and collected.

Men have won the President's chair (and lost it also) for their stand upon this one question alone. Nothing, including the Civil War (which was a phase of the tariff dispute between the foreign free-trading cotton growers and the New England textile manufacturers desirous of protection) has so deeply torn the political hearts of Americans.

But this time congress, with Republican votes, authorized a further slashing of 25 percent by the President singlehanded making 75 percent in all from the old high tariff rates) without advice or consent of congress—or the Republican national committee.

Yet, even Republican Senator Smith of industrial New Jersey voted for it, changing his mind in the last few days from his previously announced repugnance to such a threat to American industrialist, farmer and laborer from cheap foreign competition.

Indeed, the senate did not change the bill one whit from the house version, which caused revival of all the partisan fighting of ages, but it just said "yea" in a loud voice and sent it on to the President's desk, where he could victoriously find it upon his return from San Francisco.

The hint of these strange doings should have been sufficient warning that something was wrong, but if anyone reported it, I have not seen the report.

Any analyst, however, will be forced to conclude the victory was for enigmatism, more than for Truman. Just before the slashing authority passed the house (and in order to get it through), Mr. Truman sent a billet to his friend Speaker Sam Rayburn saying:

"I have had drawn to my attention statements to the effect that this increased authority might be used in such a way as to endanger or 'trade out' segments of American industry, American agriculture, or American labor. No such action was taken under President Roosevelt and Cordell Hull and no such action will take place under my presidency."

The only reason for a tariff rate, of course, is to protect some American industry, farm or worker from cheap production costs coming in competition from abroad. There are no tariffs on non-competitive products, no reason for any.

If there is to be no "danger" to domestic interests from tariff cutting, how can there be any tariff cutting—in fact, why was the subject ever mentioned, or the law passed?

To this question, no senator I have found has even a private answer. The only suggestion approaching an explanation is that Mr. Truman expects to horn in somehow on the German and Jap trade by some magic yet undisclosed, and it will have to be big magic because the Nazi and Jap cost of production was what made this trade possible (including electric light bulbs in our ten cent stores for half our cost of production).

DIET AND HEALTH

A Common Parasite And Its Symptoms

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M. D.

ONE would not ordinarily think of infestation with pinworms as a very serious disorder. However, this condition may be responsible for many disagreeable symptoms.

According to Doctor Wilfred N. Sisk of Asheville, North Carolina, pinworms may cause such symptoms as poor appetite, restlessness during sleep, nervousness, craving for sweets, itching about the lower opening of the bowel, pains in the abdomen, and nightmares. Poor appetite, which interferes with proper nutrition, is frequently the most serious symptom. Second in importance is the restlessness which disturbs the patient's rest.

Pinworms in Children

Usually, children who have pinworms are somewhat undernourished and underweight. Sometimes they have dark circles under the eyes. Frequently, there is anemia or lack of coloring in the blood. There may be a slight increase in the number of cells in the blood, known as eosinophils.

Pinworm infestation is quite frequent. Doctor Sisk believes that about one-fifth to one-third of the children in the lower economic groups may have this type of disturbance.

In recent times, not only has a new method of diagnosing pinworm infestation been discovered, but also an effective method of treatment. The method of diagnosis entails the use of a cellophane swab which is rubbed around the lower opening of the bowel, and then smeared on a glass slide. Then a search is made for the pinworm eggs.

In the new form of treatment, a drug known as gentian violet is employed. However, even with this new treatment, the condition is not an easy one to cure.

The pinworms lay their eggs outside the opening of the bowel. These eggs then get on the bedclothes as well as on the child's clothing. Thus, when one member of the family has the condition, it is likely to spread to other members of the family. It is a good plan in case one member of the family is found to have pinworms, to attempt to find them in the other members of the family.

Doctor Sisk thinks that several such tests should be carried out before it is decided that pinworm infestation is not present.

In the treatment with gentian violet, tablets of the drug are used. The tablets must be swallowed whole. Six tablets are given at intervals during each day for one week, then the treatment is stopped for a week, and then resumed for another week. Of course, children receive smaller amounts than do adults. The only objection to this form of treatment is that in some cases it causes sickness to the stomach and vomiting. Sometimes the sickness to the stomach may be so severe that the treatment has to be discontinued.

Another drug which is employed is one known as phenothiazine. However, nausea and vomiting as well as paleness and blood in the urine frequently occur with the use of this preparation. Hence, it may not be as useful as gentian violet.

Whenever a child shows any of the symptoms which appear to be due to pinworms, careful tests should be made to determine if such worms are present, and when found, treatment should be promptly carried out.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

O. A. I.—Would you please tell me what causes the urine to have a strong ammonia odor and how to avoid it?

Answer:—The ammonia odor is no cause for concern. This is normal. If the odor is excessively strong it may indicate some infection of the bladder or kidneys. An examination of the urine would be helpful in determining if any abnormal condition is present.

J. F. I.—For the past year I have been under treatment for lumbago. What could cause this condition?

Answer:—Lumbago merely means pain in the back. Such pain may come from a variety of disorders, such as arthritis of the spine, inflammation of the muscles, nerve disturbances, faulty posture and disorders within the abdomen. A complete study by an orthopedic specialist would be helpful in determining the cause of the trouble. Then it can be properly treated.

Looking Back In Pickaway County

Another significant comment came from Sen. Tom Stewart (D) of Tennessee, during a hearing on the lack of a central inventory of available surplus for small business.

"Surplus property is on the wrong track," he said. "It may turn out to be another Teapot Dome."

REP. CLINTON ANDERSON (D) of New Mexico, is likely to move quickly to provide more poultry for meat-hungry easterners after he takes over as secretary of agriculture on July 1. He is now on tour of the western states probing the poultry and egg situation. Anderson is expected to urge the Army to buy its poultry from the midwest instead of purchasing all of its quotas from the Delaware, Maryland and Virginia area. This should allow more food for the east.

Anderson is also reported to favor shipment to Europe of food, of which there is an ample supply in this country. This would include cereals and some grains.

UNITED STATES CIVIL SERVICE commission figures show that approximately 15,000 World War II veteran placements were made in the government civil service during April.

This swells to 343,020, it was explained, the number of veteran placements made in the government service from January, 1943, down to the present.

Since July 1, 1943, 7,580 physically handicapped persons have been placed in the government service.

SOUTHERN DEMOCRATS and most Republicans did not like the Supreme court decision freeing Harry Bridges, west coast longshoremen's leader, from the deportation order issued by Attorney General Francis Biddle three years ago.

But it is doubtful that Congress will take any further action against Bridges. The reason is that a bill offered more than five years ago directing the deportation of Bridges was revised to include the removal of all aliens who were or subsequently became Communist party members at the time of their entry to the United States.

The anti-Bridges faction feels that the Supreme court decision would now militate against congressional approval of any legislation specifically ordering the deportation of Bridges.

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

UNDER THE line of supple poplars a lacy pattern of sunlight and shadow fell across the brown dirt road. Terry and Raff rode their horses in silence.

Leaving the cool protection of the estancia trees and coming out to open fields, the sun was hot on their backs. Stretching boundlessly to the west, the sea of wire grass and thistle rippled in the wind. The line of the distant horizon was unbroken except for a legion of windmills that marched like gray skeletons to meet the sky.

Several times, as they rode side by side, Raff threw a furtive glance toward Terry. He noticed that the laughter had gone out of her eyes. He noticed, too, how lovely she was in the sunlight. A bright yellow scarf around her head, wisps of copper hair gleaming like polished gold where the scarf didn't cover. The even tan of her skin, the strong classic features.

"Why so serious?" he asked rather abruptly.

Terry turned to smile at him. "I'm sorry," she said. "I guess I was just enjoying the quiet."

"It couldn't be you're carrying the torch for someone?"

Terry's first impulse was anger. Suddenly she thought better of it. She tried to keep her voice even.

"You, of course," she smiled.

"You wouldn't be kidding me?" Terry didn't answer right away and Raff looked at her seriously.

"You're pretty fond of Brooks," he said.

Terry could feel the flush of color rise in her face.

"Everyone is fond of him," she said fiercely. "Aren't you?"

"Best friend I have," Raff said. "But it's a little different. I'm not a woman."

Terry had a wild impulse to turn her horse around and streak back to the estancia. She realized then how obvious that would be. She might as well scream from the house tops that she was in love with Brooks Kimberly. She suddenly remembered the barrier she had promised to build in her heart. If she were back in New York it would be different. There everything was fair in love and war; here, when a man had given his promise to marry, it held the same finality as marriage itself. Again she made a silent vow: to put Brooks out of her mind forever. She pulled herself from her mood, tossed her head toward Raff and cried, "Race you to the next windmill!"

With that she dug the heels of her riding boots into the horse's flanks as he lunged forward. The horses ran neck and neck, their hooves beating into the soft ground, the wind whistling past. A few yards from the windmill Terry stretched neck, gave him a last urge in the flank. He leaped and beat Raff's horse by a length. Terry drew rein and brought her horse to a stop. She leaned over and patted him affectionately on the neck. "Atta boy," she laughed. "You really can run!"

Raff walked his lathered pinto along side.

"It isn't fair, of course," he grinned.

"Why not?"

"Even horses fall under the spell of a beautiful woman! Old Bandido there hasn't moved that fast since he was a colt."

"Bandido! Is that his name?" Terry asked. "That's a nice name for a horse. What does it mean?"

"Outlaw," Raff said. "He used to be the best round-up horse on the place. He's too old for that now."

After their horses had cooled down a bit they started off at a walk.

"Where are we going?" Terry asked.

"To the old Vargo place," Raff said. "You've never been there. Ramon Vargo used to work for Brooks' father. When he got old he suffered from delusions of grandeur. The senior Kimberly thought a lot of him. Retired him on a small pension and built him this place. It's long been deserted now."

"Is that the place the peons refer to as 'Tonto Paraiso'?"

"That's right," Raff nodded. "It means fool's paradise. The old man thought that it was a great estancia. Three times the size of Windmere. Until he died he thought he was a very rich man."

"The peons have some superstitions about that place," Terry said, suddenly remembering. "Twice now little Pedro has said to me that Vargo rode last night. What do they mean by that?"

Raff threw back his head and laughed.

"They were all afraid of Vargo because he talked so crazy. Since then, when anything unpleasant happens that they can't explain, they blame it on poor old Vargo. They think that because they laughed at him when he was on earth, he comes back at night on horseback to tantalize them."

Terry pointed to a green island of trees on the far horizon.

"Is that the place over there?"

"That's it," Raff said. "It's in a cedar grove, where it's cool and shady. A perfect place to have our picnic."

A few minutes more and they rode out of the glare of the noonday sun into the thick shade of the trees. They chose a grassy spot and Raff led the horses away and tied them, while Terry took packages of sandwiches and a thermos from the saddlebag Raff had handed down to her.

While they were eating Raff said, "These sandwiches are, what is it you say? super."

"I'll make a Yankee of you yet!" Terry laughed.

After they had finished eating they stretched out on the soft carpet of sweet smelling grass, their heads close together. Raff half turned. His hand reached out to touch Terry's arm.

"I wouldn't really make such a bad husband," he said.

Terry smiled. "On the contrary," she said. "I think you'd make a very good one."

"But not for you?"

She rumpled his blond, curly hair and looked at him a little wistfully. "I'm just not sure yet," she said.

"You want me to be sure?"

"I wouldn't want you any other way," Raff said. "I promise I won't mention it again. I'll know when you're sure."

They rode on then for several hours across the flat stretches of pampas. Sometimes cantering their horses briskly through the waist-high grass, sometimes walking them slowly so they could rest. They saw a flaming sunset that sent a brilliant wash of orange, and finally a delicate shade of pink from distant Patagonia. They felt the distant chill in the wind when the sun was gone. They saw a cold, bright moon rise in the sky. It was nine when they finally rode through the heavy darkness into the west gates of the estancia. Lights shown out from the great house, warm and welcoming.

As they stood at the door Raff put his arm around Terry's waist lightly and looked down at her face, a dull ivory oval in the shreds of moonlight.

"I'll be waiting for you," he said softly. "No matter how long it might be."

FAMILY CIRCLE HAS MEETING

A cooperative dinner was the main feature of the evening for 45 members of the Lutheran Family Circle, when they met Thursday at the parish house.

After the dinner the business meeting was opened by Mr. Herbert Hammel and the minutes were read by Mrs. Galen Mowery. Mr. and Mrs. Delvin Smith, were admitted as new members.

Mrs. Alice Sensenbrenner, Mrs. Mary Stevens, and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Young had charge of the program, which was opened with the group singing of "America." Warren Leist gave a trumpet solo, accompanied on the piano by his aunt, Mrs. Marvene Burgett. Contests were conducted by the group and the meeting was closed with prayer.

Group Meets With Mrs. Fred Colville

Mrs. Fred Colville, 329 East Main street, was hostess to members of Group H of the Women's Association of the Presbyterian church, Thursday evening at her home. Mrs. Franklin Kibler was the assisting hostess.

Mrs. Loring Evans was in charge of the meeting, during which Mrs. Colville gave the devotions.

Mrs. Charles Smith reviewed an article "Chaplains Go Everywhere." Contests were conducted and prizes were awarded Mrs. Melvin Yates, and Mrs. George Goodchild.

It was decided that no meetings will be held during the summer. The next meeting will be a covered dish dinner at the home of Mrs. Yates.

NEWS Behind the NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

Why would a Democratic Republican vote for a Democratic tariff proposition like that?

Indeed, the administration went compromisingly further and announced firmly that an escape clause would be adopted to its future tariff-cutting treaties, one like the provision of the Mexican treaty which says restrictive quotas on imports can be imposed whenever the shipping nation gets too much goods (in our opinion) in any line of exports, or more than we can handle.

But we have been told by the administration, the leftwingers and even Republicans that quotas are horrible; in fact, were the cause of the war and Mr. Truman's people have advertised his new tariff slashing powers as beautiful bonanza of the beautiful post war world, the one "indispensable leg" of the Roosevelt post-war program, including also the Bretton Woods bank and exchange matter and, incidentally, the San Francisco agreement.

The indispensable leg apparently has rheumatic quotas and non-competitive arthritides. Do not ask me to make sense out of this tariff slashing thing. No one else has. If you want a personal hint, mine is that tariffs are archaic and of little importance at 25 percent of their normal rate or 100 percent. The financial state of the nations of this world makes the value of their currency and many other factors (credit, goods available, etc.) the truly important considerations of trade. The whole subject is obsolete.

But this, of course, is only my guess. As far as anyone knows, it was "the greatest victory" Mr. Truman has won in congress—but certainly also the greatest one enigmatism has won in my time.
